

About Laboratory in Civil Engineering

D. A (Spain)

The laboratory is one of the places where you will spend more time here (don't worry, only in the academic life). And how is the life there? Well, it is a really comfortable place for study with your own desk, space for meetings and sometimes extra activities. For example, in my building every Friday we have the International Friday Lunch where we can gather with other international students as well as Japanese for having lunch together and meeting new or old faces.

In every lab there is a good combination between Japanese and non-Japanese making a very international environment where English is a good communication language. But, at the same time, this is a very good opportunity for practicing all the lessons from the Japanese Language Class. Every of your lab mates will enjoy to help you with that and you will feel how you are progressing. At the same time, they can help you with your homework for the class, which is also very useful. To sum up, just come and enjoy while learning.
